ABSTRACT

Based on a survey conducted by the American Association of Junior Colleges (AAJC), this directory provides information on 837 non-profit, public and private two-year colleges in the United States and its territories, including statistics on 1965-66 enrollments, personnel, and student costs. Following material on the scope and compilation of the directory, an analysis of two-year college growth from 1961 to 1966 is presented. Next, the directory lists the colleges alphabetically by state, including the following information for each: location; chief administrative head; year organized as a junior college; type of control or affiliation; AAJC membership; state recognition or accrediting agency; programs (i.e., transfer and/or occupational); co-educational or single-sex status; October 1965 enrollment of full- and part-time freshman, sophomore, and unclassified students; October 1965, summer 1966, and October 1966 total enrollments; full- and part-time instructional and administrative faculty in 1965-66; tuition for in-district, out-of-district, and out-of-state students; and fall application deadline. Statewide enrollment summaries are then provided for all institutions and public and independent colleges, followed by tables showing distribution of size of enrollment, independent and church-related schools by type of control, and accredited schools by state. Information on changes in institutions, the AAJC, junior college organizations, and state administrators is presented in the final sections. (AYC)

INTRODUCTION

The 1967 Junior College Directory is published in an effort to provide the latest information on two-year college enrollments and related data. As has been the case for the past several years, this year's Directory reflects the dramatic growth in numbers of institutions and the expanding role of junior colleges in accommodating young people and adults alike. The rapid growth begun a decade or more ago is obviously continuing.

Opening fall enrollments for 1966 totaled 1,464,099, up by 13.26 per cent over opening registrations for fall of 1965. Part of this increase, of course, is accounted for by the number of new colleges and other institutions listed for the first time in the 1967 report. The total number of colleges listed in the Directory is 837, compared to 771 in last year's report.

In addition to enrollment data, the Directory contains information on tuitions and fees and on programs offered by junior colleges. This is in response to increased demand for such information on the part of parents and young people. As in the past, the Directory contains information on accreditation, control, types of institutions, association membership, enrollments, and administrative and instructional staffs.

Other parts of the Directory include summary tables, by state, on junior college enrollments; the distribution of size of enrollments in junior colleges; the number of independent and church-related junior colleges; the number of regionally accredited junior colleges; and a list of colleges that have announced plans to open in 1967.

It should be noted that the enrollment totals for fall of 1966 include all students who were taking courses, whether part-time or full-time, for credit or noncredit.

Information was obtained through a questionnaire survey. The Association, therefore, has relied heavily on the reporting institutions for reliability of all information contained in the Directory. Additional information about junior colleges may be found in the seventh edition of American Junior Colleges (1967), edited by Edmund J. Gleazer, Jr. The book is being published by the American Council on Education, 1785 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036.

The American Association of Junior Colleges in general follows the criteria established for American Junior Colleges in determining those institutions to be included in the Directory. That is, institutions included were those accredited or recognized by the country's six regional accrediting agencies and state level agencies authorized to approve junior colleges. The Directory does not include proprietary colleges.

The editors acknowledge the assistance of the Research Division of the National Education Association in processing information collected by the AAJC staff. Additional assistance was provided by Mary Aitcheson and Mrs. Kathi Borsoni.

An Analysis

In 1964, more than one student in every four beginning his program of higher education in the United States enrolled in a junior college. This represented an increase of 106,000 students over the preceding year. A summary of enrollments for the six-year period 1961-66 reveals a consistent increase in junior college enrollments. Figure 1 shows the rate of increase for these years.

It has been estimated that by 1970, there will be 1,000 junior colleges enrolling nearly 2 million students. The picture outlined in the 1967 Junior College Directory would seem to bear out this prediction.

The extent of college growth in 1966 is not only reflected in the increase in student enrollments over those reported in 1965, but in the opening of new institutions in the fall of 1966. Moreover, there are other questions of interest. What new institutions were organized, and what is the size of their opening enrollments? In what states is the growth most pronounced? What relationship exists between the increases in private and public colleges? What are some of the factors affecting the increase or decrease in enrollments? How does the growth of 1966 compare with that of former years?

There is no known study of comparisons of growth for the current year. Various articles make reference to growth, but no studies are available to either substantiate or deny the fact that there is an increase. Comparisons in this analysis were made with the figures reported in the 1966 Directory.

Junior college growth increased in 1966 at about the same rate as experienced during the preceding five years. Growth is the greatest in public colleges as compared to private colleges. Some colleges did not respond to the Junior College Directory survey. Because the normal expectation is for most colleges to show increases in enrollments, those colleges not responding are assumed to have enrollments equal to those of 1965.

The number of reporting colleges increased from 772 in 1965 to 837 in 1966, an increase of sixty-five colleges over the year. These colleges report a total enrollment of 1,464,099 students — an increase of 171,346 over 1965. This represents an increase of 13.26 per cent in student enrollment and an increase of 8.42 per cent in the number of colleges. The increase in the number of colleges includes fifty-two new institutions, and twenty-eight institutions that were not listed in 1965 for various reasons. Fifteen institutions were dropped from the Directory because of change in status. A list of the twenty-eight institutions not listed in 1965 follows Table VII of the Directory. The rate of increase for number of colleges is shown in Figure 2.

According to the data compiled from the sources listed before, an initial listing of fifty-five new colleges and campuses was devised. No confirming information could be obtained from three of the institutions. Data for the remaining institutions are an integral part of Table I and are summarized as follows:

Type of College	Number	Initial Fall Enrollments
Public	49	52,936
Private	3	298
Total	52	53,234

The size of these new colleges varied from 12,688 students in the large public Seattle Community College to the thirty-eight students in the small private Tomlinson College in Tennessee. Florida and New Jersey each opened five new institutions while Hawaii, Michigan, North Carolina, and Pennsylvania each established four new colleges.

A comparison of enrollments in public junior colleges for 1966 shows that enrollments were up 164,894 students over 1965 or an increase of 14.31 per cent. Forty-five states report overall gains in enrollments, while only two states show a decrease. Of the 565 colleges reporting in 1966, 449 showed gains totaling 208,271 students and 104 showed losses of 43,377 students. Only twelve colleges reported the same enrollments for both years.

An analysis of the individual colleges reflected several instances of wide fluctuation in enrollments when compared with the preceding year. Some attempt was made to discover the reasons for these large fluctuations, particularly where there was a large drop in enrollments. These attempts, made primarily by letter, revealed the following reasons for sharp drops in enrollments:

1. Incorrect reporting in 1965
2. The opening of a new two-year college near an existing institution with some resultant movement from the established institution to the new institutions
3. The establishment of a branch of a state university in the same city in which a junior college was already operating. There was some movement of students from the two-year college to the state university
4. A decrease in high school graduations in the area served by a community college
5. The increase in the military draft of manpower.

A comparison of enrollments in private junior colleges shows that 1966 enrollments were up 6,452 over 1965 or a national increase of 4.58 per cent. A much greater fluctuation in enrollments is reflected in the private junior colleges in comparison to the public colleges. Twenty-five states report overall gains in enrollments, while eighteen states show decreases in enrollments.

Of the 272 colleges reporting in October 1966, 162 showed gains and ninety colleges reported losses in enrollments. Fifteen colleges report the same enrollments as 1965; however, eleven of these are colleges from which no reply to the Directory questionnaire was received, and the assumption was made that enrollments remained constant. A significant fact is that while three new private colleges opened with a total of 298 students, five private colleges with an enrollment of 2,805 students either closed or became four-year institutions. The overall growth in private junior colleges is not the result of establishing new institutions, but rather the result of increased enrollments in some key states.

During 1966 junior colleges continued to grow at about the same rate as experienced during the past several years. Student enrollments increased 13.3 per cent in 1966 as compared with an average annual increase of 14.8 per cent from 1961 to 1965. Assuming a constant annual increase of 10 per cent in enrollments, projections for the next four years are as follows:

1967	1,616,000
1968	1,776,000
1969	1,954,000
1970	2,150,000

It thus appears that projection of a 2 million student enrollment in 1970 is a sound projection.

Definitions of Terms

ENROLLMENT

Full-time — Students carrying at least three-fourths (12 or more semester hours) of normal full-time load.

Part-time — Students enrolled in at least one course for credit and carrying less than three-fourths (less than 12 semester hours) of normal full-time load.

Freshmen — Students who have completed less than 28 semester hours of college credit at time of registration.

Sophomores — Students who have completed 28 or more semester hours of credit at time of registration.

Unclassified — Students not counted in any other category who may not have fulfilled the requirements for matriculation or who are enrolled in college-level courses for which they receive no credit. If the junior college has third-year students, these are included under unclassified.

The Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is the regional accrediting agency for junior colleges in the District of Columbia. District accreditation policies are maintained by the District Board of Education through the office of the Superintendent of Schools. The board licenses and accredits Majorie Webster Junior College, a proprietary college for women, as well as the nonproprietary institutions listed under the District of Columbia in Table I.
